The human body is a collection of energy flows in continuous activity, in an effort to strike a balance between the stimuli of the outer world and the inner emotional sphere. A condition of prolonged stress can undermine the harmony of these two aspects, creating a state of general malaise. Il Recupero dell'Energia Originale aims to reprogram the body by helping to stimulate the necessary resources for this exchange of forces, and regain a dynamic equilibrium. Its methodology is based on the integration of the most recent discoveries of neuroscience, re-integrated within the more complex vision of classical Chinese medicine. The effectiveness of the treatments is continually overseen through heart rate monitoring, according to mathematical models that interpret the variability of the autonomic nervous system as a stress state detector.
